

Abstract

This article discusses some aspects of the relationship between international trade law and human rights. The author examine the application of article XX Gatt and article XVI Gats by Appellate Body and discuss about the new trend concerning the linkages of human rights and Gatt-Wto provisions. The article argue that there are some feasible approaches to social dimension within the Wto system.